Olivera Street in 1800's known as Calle de las Vinas, Wine or Vine Street. Secondo Guasti reuted the Avila Adobe and ran a restaurant there. Also later used by Brookside Winery.

OLD WINERY AND EL PASEO INN (ca.1870-1914) was built by Antonio Pelanconi, who also owned the Pelanconi House (La Golondrina Restaurant) across Olvera Street. Pelanconi died in 1879 and his widow carried on the winery business. El Paseo Inn moved into the southern portion of the Winery in the 1930s. In 1984, excavations turned up artifacts relating to the Spanish and Mexican eras of Los Angeles' past. El Pueblo's administrative offices have been located in the Old Winery and now it houses an art gallery.
